

Leading the future
of water with you

IWA Individual Membership

Together, towards a water-wise world

The future of water management is one of the most critical issues facing the world today. The International Water Association (IWA) aims to turn knowledge into action by bridging the gap between research and practice, and providing global leadership to find innovative solutions to the world's pressing water challenges.

At IWA, we believe that our members are indispensable agents of change to accomplish IWA's vision to create a world in which water is wisely managed to satisfy the needs of human activities and ecosystems in an equitable and sustainable way.

We want to lead the next decade of transformation within the water sector, and we look forward to doing so by working together with our members and empowering the next generation of water professionals.

Our offerings, your opportunities

IWA brings its members together to encourage the exchange of knowledge and help generate innovative solutions to current and future water challenges. By becoming an IWA member, you enrich your professional skills and play a key part in creating a sustainable, water-wise world.

ACCESS UNIQUE CONTENT AND THOUGHT LEADERSHIP

IWA Specialist Groups Pioneering science

To help accelerate research into practice in water management, IWA brings together experts from across the globe and disciplines through IWA's Specialist Groups (SGs). These are platforms for water leaders to discuss and collaborate on the critical scientific, technical and management issues affecting the water sector. They facilitate cooperation, networking and knowledge generation, primarily through regular conferences, meetings, newsletters and discussion forums.

IWA at a glance

We are the world's largest international professional association focused on water, and covering the full water cycle from research to practice.

We are a global network of water professionals and experts across the water sector, including from academia, research, practice, policy, regulation, consulting, engineering and utilities.

Our members are based across 130 countries worldwide.

We facilitate cooperation, networking and knowledge generation via IWA's member communities, events, publications and programmes.

As an IWA member, you can join any of the SGs, participate in their discussions, share your latest findings and be informed about state-of-the-art knowledge via the groups newsletters. The main activities of each SG are international conferences, publications and workshops. We recommend that you join between 5-7 SGs in order to ensure optimal engagement.

If you want to be more deeply involved in the work conducted by these groups, you can be nominated to join the SG Management Committees, play a role in the organisation of specialised conferences, or volunteer to create or participate in focused Task Groups or Clusters.

The Source magazine

Delivering practical intelligence

The quarterly magazine The Source, is the official publication of IWA. It keeps IWA's members informed about the latest water industry developments. It covers major water management debates, and focusses on the water professionals behind the technology, science, policy and regulation influencing all the stages of the water cycle.

Your IWA membership entitles you to a free print subscription of the magazine (delivered every quarter) and digital access online. IWA members are also invited to submit their own thought leadership pieces for both The Source and the IWA blog.

EXPAND YOUR NETWORK

IWA Events

Exchanging knowledge and expertise

Assembling the power of the IWA Network is part of IWA's core strength. Each year, IWA organises and supports many specialised conferences and seminars on a wide variety of topics in water management in locations worldwide. From major international conferences to small specialist meetings, IWA Events bring together the world's leading researchers and scientists, utility leaders, regulators and practitioners to share knowledge, experience and know-how concerning the most pressing water challenges, and provide innovative solutions.

Attending our events is an excellent opportunity to keep yourself updated on pioneering science and technological innovation in the water sector, meet in person with fellow members and peers, and experience the power of the IWA Network. Your IWA membership facilitates your attendance by granting you exclusive discounts on your delegate tickets.
